Dear Friends and Colleagues:

On behalf of the California Health Professions Consortium (CHPC), we welcome you to our 5th annual statewide conference: “Health Reform Implementation, Healthy Communities and the Health Workforce Pipeline.” At this exciting and historic time, it is more urgent and important than ever that we work together to increase diversity in the health professions and provide opportunity for California youth to become the next generation of health leaders and professionals.

Improving health access, quality, outcomes and cost require a health workforce that represents and is committed to serving our emerging majority populations and all California communities. We are fortunate to have a growing population of young people from our communities who with the right exposure, education, support and opportunity can meet our workforce needs and have rewarding health careers. We are also fortunate to have so many passionate leaders and successful programs that are committed to working individually and collectively make these goals possible.

The goal of the conference is to provide powerful inspiration, insights and connections that will help us advance our individual and collective goals. We are excited to have a great turnout of leaders from academic and health career pipeline programs (K-12, community college, baccalaureate and multi-level); health professions training programs; employers from multiple health sectors; workforce and diversity advocates and representatives from government agencies and foundations. We encourage fully engage and take advantage of the opportunity to:

- Understand how implementation of health reform and healthy community initiatives can impact and will rely on health workforce and pipeline programs
- Engage and align with the Alliance for Boys and Men of Color to support our youth and communities
- Understand career and service opportunities in mental health, behavioral health, and substance use
- Learn about emerging opportunities to empower K-16 students to successfully pursue health careers
- Contribute promising practices and lessons learned for strengthening pipeline programs and their impact
- Attend practical workshops on priority pipeline program topics such as evaluation
- Connect the dots and network with pipeline colleagues from your region and throughout the state

We are confident that you find will this conference energizing, informational, and practical. We look forward to working together to strengthen and grow a quality, diverse health workforce for California!

About the California Health Professions Consortium

The California Health Professions Consortium (CHPC) is a statewide consortium, under the direction of Dr. Katherine Flores (Director, UCSF-Fresno Latino Center for Medical Education and Research; Clinical Faculty, UCSF School of Medicine - Dept. of Family & Community Medicine) and Jeff Oxendine (Associate Dean, Public Health Practice - UC Berkeley School of Public Health), and is comprised of organizations and individuals with a vested interest in increasing diversity in California's health workforce. The members of CHPC represent various sectors, including direct service providers (hospitals, health plans, physicians, nurses), policy and advocacy organizations, academic institutions (including representation from the community college, Cal State University, and University of California systems, as well as private institutions), health pipeline programs, and other entities. To move forward with the Consortium's goals and objectives, we have four committees entitled: Pipeline, Policy & Advocacy, Resources, and Research & Evaluations, which are charged with specific action items. CHPC holds in-person convening's on a quarterly basis, and our meetings are rotated between San Francisco and Los Angeles. CHPC is partnering closely with the California Health Workforce Alliance to align efforts around health workforce and diversity and strengthen support for collective and individual program efforts.
